

RIGHT MIDFIELD / RIGHT WINGERS

#50

Willy REITGASSL (1936-1988)

*1 A (1 goal), Germany, Outside Right
Cup finalist 1960*

A quick and hard-shooting outside right and quite a dribbler on the right flank. Internationally, Reitgassl was picked as one of the players that were able to succeed Helmut Rahn on the right wing but Frankfurt's Richard Kress eventually won out.

Rudolf (Rudi) NAFZIGER (1945-2008)

*1 A, Germany, Outside Right
Cup winner 1966, 1967, 1969
CWC winner 1967*

A quick and tricky outside right with an elegant playing style. In the young Bayern side of the 1960s he formed a very good pair of wingers with Dieter Brenninger on the left who serviced Rainer Ohlhauser and Gerd Müller, the two central forwards in Bayern's 4-2-4 of that period. With two such goalscoring threats in the middle it was neglectable that Nafziger himself rarely threatened the goal.

Heinz GRÜNDEL (b. 1957)

4 A, Germany, Right Wing/Midfielder

League champion 1983

Cup winner 1980, 1982, 1987

Cup finalist 1984

A fleet-footed, nimble right winger with a very fine technique, Heinz Gründel was a full-blooded dribbler who spent the first half of his career successfully in the Belgian league playing for THOR Waterschei and Standard Liège before joining Hamburg in 1985 where he immediately became a star player and also became an international. In the second part of his career he played more centrally in midfield and was part of the very fluent and technical Eintracht Frankfurt team of the early-1990s which also featured Uwe Bein, Andreas Möller, Ralf Falkenmayer and Anthony Yeboah.

#47

Hans CIESLARCZYK (b. 1937)

7 A (3 goals), Germany, Inside Forward/Outside Right/Outside Left

A powerful shooter of the ball, Cieslarczyk also had a deft winger's touch, great pace and could attack from both sides of the flanks. Originally an inside forward he quickly moved wide and later in his career went back inside to attack centrally. Typically for many wingers of the time, he was sometimes a bit too wayward but this changed as his career progressed. In the second half of his career he evolved a proness for injuries and couldn't live up to his earlier successes.

#46

Roger VAN GOOL

7 A (2 goals), Belgium, Right Wing

League champion 1976, 1978

League runner-up 1974

Cup winner 1977, 1978

Cup finalist 1980

UEFA Cup finalist 1976

A compact, brawny tempo dribbler on the right wing, not mainly a crosser but a winger who often opted to cut inside and who looked to score himself instead of providing.

His time in Germany was quite a success although he always carried the burden of being Germany's first ever 1 million marks import and as a result the crowds expected him to be a wondertype of player, which he could not fulfill.

#45

Karl (Gaukler) SCHERM (1904-1977)

2 A (1 goal), Germany, Outside Right/Inside Left

A fast and hard-shooting outside right who was one of the best in that position during the second half of the 1920s and the early 1930s. Nicknamed "juggler", Scherm was unusual for an outside forward as his physicality was massive and one might have expected to see him deployed as a centre forward instead of a winger.

#44

Maximilian (Max) GABLONSKY (1890-1969)

4 A, Germany, Outside Right

An excellent outside right who was also successful at track-and-field. He almost made Germany's final squad for the 1912 Olympics for the 4 x 100 metres relay but had to eschew his participation because of a university exam. His number of caps was limited because at that time the FA officials preferred to call up many players from a few major clubs and in his club Bayern München Gablonsky was considered the only player valuable enough to play for Germany hence he was often overlooked as no Bayern block could be formed for the national team. Gablonsky's one lasting fame however is that he is Bayern's first international player.

#43Karl-Heinz (Kalle) DEL'HAYE (b. 1955)

2 A, Germany, Right Wing

League champion 1975, 1976, 1977, 1981

League runner-up 1978

Cup winner 1982, 1984

UEFA Cup 1975, 1979

UEFA Cup finalist 1980

Euro winner 1980

In the late-1970s the lightweight Kalle Del'Haye was considered by many as the great new hope for the right wing, but the diminutive Mönchengladbach winger lacked the necessary punch and was almost a total non-threat in front of the goal. With years going by his style became less spectacular, more workman-like and hard-running as he became more of a wide midfielder. His biggest asset throughout his career was his great pace.

#42

Gilbert GRESS (b. 1941)

3 A, France, Outside Right/Inside Right

League champion 1971, 1972

Cup winner 1966, 1972

An outside right with the qualities of a playmaker, Frenchman Gilbert Gress was the undisputed star player of VfB Stuttgart in the late-1960s. Apparently Gress had a hard time getting into the French national side because his long hair was not tolerated.

Champions Cup 2001

Champions Cup finalist 1999

Intercontinental Cup 2001

Bosnian Footballer 1998, 1999, 2000, 2004

An allrounder with emphasis on the offense. Right-side, left-side, at front, at the back: the lively Bosnian did well anywhere. His most common role was that of a right-sided midfielder, sometimes operating like a winger, sometimes like a full back. One of the most versatile players in the great Bayern team at the turn of the millennium, very temperamental and always dedicated to his task. His managers cherished Salihmadzic's industriousness, his strong will and positive charisma.

Rudolf (Rudi) SELIGER (b. 1951)

2 A, Germany, Outside Right

Cup finalist 1975

Probably one of the last few 'classic' outside rights, fast, tricky, a dangerous finisher but definitely more a provider than a goalscorer. Rudi Seliger was a similar player to Düsseldorf's Wolfgang Seel who was technically more sound while Seliger was the more dynamic player with a real punch.

Germany, Outside Right

League runner-up 1964

Cup winner 1970

League runner-up 1980, 1981, 1984
Champions Cup 1983
Champions Cup finalist 1980
UEFA Cup finalist 1982

A small, agile winger with an explosive acceleration but a bit too fragile to succeed at the top level. In later years he was often deployed as a support striker and then as an industrious midfielder. His service from the wing was good and inside the box he was dangerous due to his quick turns and agility.

Zvezdan ČEBINAC (1939-2012)

20 A (4 goals), Yugoslavia, Outside Right
League champion 1961, 1962, 1963, 1968

The Serbian international embodied the type of the ingenious Balkan dribbler-and-crosser who loved to drive his marker nuts with his imaginative dribbling style. A very sensitive player who lacked defensive commitment which often led to quarrels with his managers, most notably Max Merkel in Nürnberg.

Erwin WALDNER (1933-2015)

13 A (2 goals), Germany, Centre Forward/Outside Right

League runner-up 1953

Cup winner 1954, 1958

Erwin Waldner was a technically sound centre forward in the early 1950s who found his best role as an outside right by the mid-1950s. He was also often seen playing in the role of an inside right. He was counted among the closer circle of the national team for several years without managing a break through.

Josef (Seppl) PIRRUNG (1949-2011)

*2 A, Germany, Right Wing
Cup finalist 1972, 1981*

A small, nimble and agile right winger with fast acceleration and good dribbling and crossing skills who also was known as a finisher. He almost never became a professional footballer because in 1967 Pirrung broke his legs on three different occasions. One of his greatest games for his club Kaiserslautern was the legendary 7-4 vs. Bayern München in 1973, when he scored three goals himself (1-3, 3-4, 4-4).

Gerhard KAUFHOLD (b. 1928)

1 A, Germany, Outside Right/Inside Right

League runner-up 1950, 1959

A two-footed outside right and very fast with the ball at his feet, a neat and skillful dribbler who liked to roam from wide to an inside right position. Sometimes too much of an egotist dribbler, though. For Kickers Offenbach Kaufhold was goalgetter, winger and playmaker in one and thus indispensable for his team. Rumours have it that Sepp Herberger was not on very good terms with Offenbach's long-serving manager Paul Osswald which resulted in Offenbach players not getting called up for international games as often as one may have expected. Hence Kaufhold stopped at just one international appearance, as a consolation, that one game was played at Wembley stadium against England in 1954 (1-3). But maybe that rumour is false and Herberger was just not keen on Kaufhold's meandering dribble runs.

Josef BERGMAIER (1909-1943)

8 A (1 goal), Germany, Outside Right

League champion 1932

The outside right of Bayern's first ever championship-winning side combined all virtues one demanded from a top class outside forward: he was fast, a strong dribbler, tricky, could shoot powerfully but was also calm and stoic in order to always choose the right option. Bergmaier died on his 34th birthday on the Eastern front.

Felix (Fiffi) GERRITZEN (1927-2007)
4 A (1 goal), Germany, Outside Right
League runner-up 1951
Top Scorer 1955

Swift as an arrow (100 metres in 11.1 seconds) and a hard shooter, Fiffi Gerritzen was one of the most popular wingers in Germany from the late-1940s to the mid-1950s. A very skillfull player who often tried and succeeded in scoring from corner kicks using the outside of his foot and a specialist at bicycle kicks, Gerritzen quickly had a reputation as a spectacular player that could draw crowds with his name. He was hopeful to make the squad for the 1954 World Cup but an injury thwarted his plans. That injury's late complications led to a drop in his performance level and by 1958 his career in top flight had ended. After his retirement he received some recognition as a sculptor.

Richard KRESS (1925-1996)
9 A (2 goals), Germany, Outside Right
League champion 1959
Cup finalist 1964
Champions Cup finalist 1960

A fast outside right with a straightforward way who earned himself the nickname “the Blitz of Horas”. Kress was instrumental in Eintracht Frankfurt’s rise to a European power in the late-1950s. Rarely seen scoring goals, his asset was drawing several opponents his way to create space for the inside forwards. A likeable player because of his modest and reserved character, he was the oldest player in the Bundesliga’s first ever season 1963-64 aged 38.

A dynamic and very fast outside right with a very hard shot, Thielen spent the second half of his career as an attacking right back, always playing for Köln. A very intelligent player, his 24 goals scored in Oberliga West 1961-62 played a big part in Köln winning the 1962 championship. In December 1963, Thielen became the first player ever to score five goals in a single Bundesliga game (against Kaiserslautern, 5-1 to Köln).

Cup finalist 1970

Top Scorer 1974

The right winger from Montenegro joined Eintracht Braunschweig in 1975 but due to a fracture of the clavicle he had a difficult start for his club but soon became a favorite of the crowd. Popivoda was a technically very good, tricky and fast-paced dribbler. Just as he had settled in well he again fractured his clavicle and was out again. But from 1976 on he hit the big time in the Bundesliga, becoming one of the best wingers of the mid- to late-1970s. Berti Vogts stated that Popivoda was one of his most difficult opponents in the Bundesliga. Because of a severe eye disease, which almost led to blindness, Popivoda had to retire from football in 1982.

Bernd Dürnberger was a starter for Bayern München at the age of 18 playing on the wing. A year later he was retrained as a wide midfielder and also occasionally performed well as an offensive full back (on both sides). Bernd 'Wipf' Dürnberger always stood in the shadow of the big stars at Bayern, rarely made headlines himself. He was quick off the mark, very industrious, diligent and dynamic and for many seasons an indispensable player for Bayern. A technically refined allrounder who probably would have been called up many times for the national team if he had been born 20 years later.

Originally a very offensive right-sided full back, Kapellmann was converted to a right winger over the course of his career and later ended as a midfielder. A very quick, nimble player with sound technique and good crossing ability. He left Bayern in 1979 after his former teammate Uli Hoeness had become managing director since both didn't have the best relationship. After his retirement in 1980 (due to a severe injury) he became a well-known orthopaedist.

Rüdiger ABRAMCZIK (b. 1956)
19 A (2 goals), Germany, Right Wing
League runner-up 1977

Rüdiger Abramczik was one of the great crowd-pleasers of the late-70s Bundesliga. A classic right winger, extremely gifted at dribbling, very good technique, tricky, fast and sprightly but most of all a master at crossing the ball. At his debut he was the youngest player in Bundesliga history with 17 years and 3 months. Abramczik can be rated as one of the league's all-time best crossers. Many goals were scored by Klaus Fischer after a cross by Abramczik. What he lacked was the necessary ambition and consistency to succeed at the highest level. It appeared that to him, football was a bit of a laugh, not to be taken too seriously. Around 1980 his star started to fade as he found it hard to adapt to the tactical development of only two strikers instead of three and the abolishment of the classic winger.

 League champion 1994
 League runner-up 2000, 2002

Far from a goalgetter, the small and bustling all-round forward Oliver Neuville was a regular for the German national team during its most dire phase in the early 2000s. A very quick player with great ball control in high tempo. Always full of eager and zest, constantly moving, digging, bustling and thus often creating space by drawing defenders his way .

Ernst KALWITZKI (1909-1991)

Germany, Outside Right
 League champion 1934, 1935, 1937, 1939, 1940, 1942

 Cup winner 1937
 Cup finalist 1935, 1936, 1941, 1942
 Top Scorer Championship 1937, 1939, 1943

Quite possibly the greatest German player that never was capped. It is one of the great mysteries why both Otto Nerz and Sepp Herberger disregarded Kalwitzki despite his great exploits on the right wing for FC Schalke 04. Admittedly in Ernst Lehner there was a player that was considered even better but that should not have prevented Kalwitzki getting at least a handful of caps instead of none. Kalwitzki was a very prolific winger, a real goalgetter for FC Schalke 04, who kept a high level from the mid-1930s to the early-1940s. Kalwitzki was also able to play as centre forward. He was fast, tricky yet straightforward in his ways. His greatest game came in 1939 when he scored five times in the final of the German championship against Admira Wien.

Kalwitzki was a very mobile player who did not stick to the right flank but roaming the offensive half of the pitch, often playing in the centre or in an inside position. World War II ended his career as he was severely injured on the Eastern Front as his upper thigh was hit by a retained missile and his knee was penetrated by a gun shot wound.

A brilliant individualist with a work ethic not up to par with his talent. This lack of sobriety may have cost him a truly great career. 30 caps for a player of his talent are not that much. His strength was his right foot which he utilised very well for his precise crosses and passes. Defensively he was less than average though.

Ernst ALBRECHT (1907-1976)

*17 A (4 goals), Germany, Outside Right
League champion 1933
League runner-up 1936
Cup finalist 1937*

He debuted as an outside right in 1924 at 17 for Fortuna Düsseldorf and had established himself as the best player in that position in Germany by 1928. Together with centre-half Knöd Bender, Albrecht was instrumental in establishing the unsung Fortuna Düsseldorf as one of the best west German clubs of the era. Albrecht was an exceptionally fast winger and a very precise crosser from high tempo but also a goal threat of his own. He remained a fixture at outside right for Germany between 1928 and 1934 but of all things right before the 1934 World Cup he was replaced by the sensational newcomer Ernst Lehner due to an injury.

Equipped with subtle ball control Bernd Schneider was one of the few technically really outstanding German players at the turn of the millennium. His name was synonymous with technique, intelligence and versatility. One of those players that always wants to have the ball at his feet. Schneider was playfulness incarnate at a time when one could get the impression that most Germans wanted to keep a certain distance from the ball. At his best he was a right winger with real guts to try the unexpected, skilled at dribbling and deliverer of subtly weighed crosses. Later in his career Schneider also became valuable defensively, oftentimes even acting as a right back. He was also excellent as a central offensive midfielder. Schneider was not the most consistent player, it has to be said. Fluctuations in his form were not rare. A competent passer and also capable to score himself.

Top Scorer Championship 1958

Berni Klodt debuted already at the age of 16 in the first team of FC Schalke 04 (in 1942) and became a versatile winger who could be deployed on both flanks. Characterised by a very fast acceleration, a brilliant ball control at high pace, a space-consuming way of running, great power in both feet and a natural instinct for goalscoring as well as an ability for swinging in very precise crosses, Berni Klodt was arguably Germany's most talented winger in the 20 years after World War II. A player very focused on teamplay and commitment, he stood in the shadow of Helmut Rahn for most of the 1950s. At the start of the 1954 World Cup Klodt was the no. 1 outside right of Germany while Rahn was warming the bench. Over the course of the tournament however Rahn came into the team, Herberger basically just following his stomach feel that Rahn could do very special things and in the end he was proven right. Klodt didn't take it too hard in commenting: "in the end it is not important who is playing but that we are winning." When he retired in 1963 the media wrote: "Klodt was one of the most sympathetic players in football, his popularity was at times second to none. His absolute fairness was proverbial. He is the right rolemodel for the Schalke youth, who he will take care of after his retirement."

Prof. Karl WEGELE (1887-1960)
15 A (2 goals), Germany, Outside Right
League champion 1909

A very temperamental and eminently fast player who bedazzled his opponents with his constant change of position. Karl Wegele was one of the outstanding protagonists of German football before World War 1. Not much of a fighter, Wegele was in a class of his own regarding his intelligence on the pitch, often outmanoeuvring his opponents evading physical contact. Wegele was an early advocate of passing moves in triangles, which aimed at a constant switching of positions between outside and inside forwards by means of swiftly executed passes and quick change of positions.

The hardest-running Bundesliga player of the 1970s with the greatest stamina and energy reserves, Herbert 'Hacki' Wimmer began his career in Mönchengladbach in 1966 at the age of 21 as an outside right, but by 1969, Wimmer had evolved into either a holding midfielder or a wide midfielder, mostly on the right side. One of the most important players of the great Borussia Mönchengladbach side of the 1970s, his biggest moment for Germany came in the 1972 European championship when he scored a goal in the final at Brussels vs. the Soviet Union. A never-tiring presence in his club for 12 successive seasons, Wimmer was a skilled player with good passing and distribution, when in defense his good positioning allowed him not having to tackle too often and in offense, he was a lightfooted runner who would act as a capable crosser. A player wonderfully suited to quick counter-attacking football.

CWC winner 1966

"Nobody can get past God" stood on a poster in Dortmund in the 1960s, to which an unknown person manually added "except Stan Libuda". This Reinhard 'Stan' Libuda was one of the most magnificent right wingers in German football history, but also one of the most tragic. His nickname was given to him because of a similar style to Stanley Matthews; Libuda was an extremely tricky winger known for his stepovers and his imitation of the 'Matthews trick' and he also incorporated elements of Garrincha's dribbling in his style. When he had a good day, he was set out to drive the full back marking him insane but on a bad day he was basically invisible. Libuda was a very lightfooted dribbler, often had a cunning idea in the tightest of spaces and was an excellent crosser. But he was also a very sensitive player, easily unsettled by rough physical or mental treatment. For example, it was known among Bundesliga defenders that he could be unsettled just by the mention of his wife's name. His involvement in the 1971 Bundesliga scandal affected him more severely than most of the numerous other players also involved. After his retirement in 1976 he was jobless for many years, impoverished and abandoned by his wife. He died after a stroke at the age of 52.

Ernst LEHNER (1912-1986)

65 A (30 goals), Germany, Outside Right

Ernst Lehner was one of the paciest and most skilled outside rights of the mid-/late-1930s. His specialty were corner kicks, as he gained a reputation for often trying (and succeeding) in converting them directly. In a 1937 World Cup qualifier against Estonia, Germany trailed 0-1 at half-time. But after the break Germany collected 18 corner kicks, two of them Lehner converted directly and two other corners of his were headed into the Estonian goal by Jupp Gauchel – Germany won 4-1. Not few experts considered Lehner the best outside right of the 1934 World Cup in Italy, others touted him "the best amateur player in Europe" (as professionalism was not allowed in Germany in the 1930s). He was one of the players selected to represent Western Europe against Central Europe in 1937. Lehner was an explosive type of player, an offensive all-rounder with incredibly hard shot, spirited in his moves, an expert dribbler and a magnificent header of the ball. His most famous trademark was his swiftness. His club exploits remained unsatisfying because his club Schwaben Augsburg was not an elite team and Lehner was by and large the only player of real class in that club. Apart from his habit of dangerous corner kicks he also excelled at freekicks. A special achievement was that Lehner scored the 300th and the 400th goal in the history of the German national team.

A smart, nimble dribbler with great footballing instincts who initially struggled to find a place in the first team but soon became one of the best forwards in the history of the Bundesliga. Thomas Hässler was one of the most prominent and beloved midfielders of German football in the 1990s. A diminutive, stocky player with a low center of gravity who possessed a brilliant technique and was very adept at quick turns in close space with the ball tied to his right foot. A great short passer and very fine tempo dribbler. Another specialty was bending the ball viciously at freekicks. A successful blend of a tireless midfield worker, a playmaker and a tricky winger. A rare breed in that he was an individualist who was committed to teamplay.

A dribbling prodigy of small stature, Pierre Littbarski began on the right wing but later became an offensive midfielder. In both guises, he was one of the best players ever seen in German football. Like Willi Lippens he was a joker to whom professional football was basically the same as street football. His low center of gravity and his bowlegs favored his dribbling immensely. He was very dangerous coming from midfield, a very able short passer who always wanted to feel the ball at his feet. A typical 'late Littbarski' move was taking a run from midfield advancing towards the box where he would dummy one or two opponents with his quick sidestepping and then finish by bending the ball in a mean way towards the far corner of the goal. With his shooting technique, he proved to be a formidable taker of freekicks, too, and was an exceptional player in one-on-one situations. Possessing considerable stamina, Littbarski was a perfect fit for the German national team of the 1980s, yet not always an undisputed starter. Littbarski was right-footed but with a very good left foot, thus he was seen moving a lot between the flanks without his actions losing punch.

League runner-up 1960, 1964

Cup winner 1953

World Cup winner 1954

Together with Fritz Walter and Sepp Herberger, Helmut Rahn (known as ‘Der Boss’ in Germany) was the incarnation of the “Miracle of Bern”, the 1954 World Cup victory of Germany. In Germany he has an almost sacrosanct status due to scoring the most legendary goal ever scored by a German – the 3-2 vs. the Mighty Magyars in the mythical 1954 World Cup final. Helmut Rahn was a fast and forceful outside right who was two-footed and thus also frequently deployed on the left wing. Renowned for his very hard shot, Rahn was a real goalgetter. He debuted for Germany at age 22 in 1951. During the 1950s he enjoyed great success with his club RW Essen in first winning the German Cup in 1953 and then the German championship in 1955. He had a reputation of being a committed teamplayer in one moment, but wayward and fickle the next moment. Not an easy character to work with, Germany manager Sepp Herberger did manage to bring the best out of Rahn when playing for the national team. Rahn was known not to care for tactical discipline too much and hence his slogan was ‘I do my thing!’ Herberger once dubbed Rahn ‘master of positive improvisation’ and thus was more than willing to endure Rahn’s individualism on and off the pitch. Helmut Rahn was a joker who could cheer up people and thus Herberger always made sure that Helmut Rahn and the melancholic Fritz Walter would share a room.

The best foreign player in the history of German football? Many people would agree. His closest competitor is his longtime teammate Franck Ribéry. But even the wonderful Frenchman could not sustain a brilliantly high peak level as Arjen Robben did in his most outstanding period between 2013 and 2015. Definitely one of the most spectacular players ever to wear the dress of a German club, one struggles to find a comparable period of dominance of a single offensive player even if the circle includes German players. Günter Netzer for Borussia Mönchengladbach between 1970 and 1972 might be the only comparable offensive player in terms of sustaining a very high peak level over a number of seasons. Astonishingly, Robben managed a very high level in all competitions (Champions League, Bundesliga, German Cup) as well as for the Dutch national team – arguably an unprecedented level of domination. 2014 was the best year in his entire career (his own words). Virtually everything he did was characterised by incredible dynamism, playful finesse and stunning determination. Even in a Bayern side that was star-studded and arguably the best team in the world and easily the best German club team in history, the Dutchman managed to stand out. In this period Arjen Robben showed what an incredible player of world class he is when he is fully fit and injury-free over a longer period of time. Injuries – that is the cue that leads to Robben's one big flaw. Rarely has there been a player as frail and fragile as Robben with his crystalline muscles and bones. It was close to a real wonder that Robben played roughly two years injury free from early 2013 to early 2015.

Robben is the incarnation of the high quality tempo dribbler, a world class combination of supreme technical skill and high pace. Not a classic winger swinging in crosses but a player that is really world class in scoring himself when he cuts inside from the right side to score with his wonderful left foot. His willingness to score himself often led to conflicts with various central strikers in his club Bayern (Mario Gomez, Mario Mandzukic, Robert Lewandowski). Robben was often considered too egoistical for a wide player. Robben's shooting technique is marvellous, as is his ball control, his short offensive dribblings are extremely fast and dangerous and he has a good eye. One of the most productive wingers but also – despite occasional critique – one of the best providers. In his approach Robben is a more one-dimensional player than his twin on the left wing, Franck Ribéry. Yet although Robben's main weapon (cutting inside from the right wing and shooting with his left foot) is no secret and well-known to any defender in the world, he does this so well that no team has managed to devise an effective counter strategy. Someone like Robben even at the age of 33 is still playing on a world class level, because he is never full, never lacking in ambition, he still wants it all. It will be interesting to see what the future has still in store for Arjen Robben.
