For so long the poor relation of the English domestic cup competitions, the Football League Cup 'arrived' at last when the 1978 final threw up indisputably the country's top two teams: Nottingham Forest, destined to go on and win the league for the first time in their 113-year history, and Liverpool, the runners-up and European champions. Both reached the tournament's final for the first time, and to do so they both had to eliminate other top clubs in the semi-finals, when for only the third time in the League Cup's 18-year history four First Division clubs contested the penultimate stage. Leeds were sent packing by Forest, who won both legs by two clear goals, delighting in the process Brian Clough, who could not have hoped for a more satisfactory way of getting revenge on his previous club, who had, of course, severed his connection with them after a mere 44 days. Liverpool endured a far more strenuous passage, beating Arsenal by the odd goal in three at Anfield before surviving the game at Highbury in their best soak-it-all-up European away-leg tradition.

Yet when the need arose to score goals again, as it did in the final, Liverpool were for once found wanting. As clear favourites they were expected to dispose of a Forest side deprived of the services of Dave Needham, Archie Gemmill and Peter Shilton, who were cup-tied, all three having represented other clubs in the early rounds. But with their now admirable strength in depth, Forest had no difficulty in finding adequate replacements for their new centre half and key midfield player. On the other hand the effect of the absence of Shilton, now once again in the eyes of many, England's finest goalkeeper, was incalculable. It left Forest not only facing Shilton's rival for that distinction, Ray Clemence, but to overcome the massive handicap of having sold Shilton's predecessor, John Middleton, to Derby, leaving them with only 18-year-old Chris Woods in reserve.

Yet it was Woods, veteran of a handful of first team games, who captured just about every headline. Let off in the opening seconds when Kenny Dalglish delayed fatally before pulling his shot wide, Woods proceeded to get behind every Liverpool attempt - and there were many - directed at him. Displaying all the confidence, even arrogance, that might have been expected of Shilton, Forest's second choice defied Liverpool right through normal time and extra-time too. There were precious few occasions when his forwards relieved the pressure on him.

Having withstood the Liverpool onslaught once, few expected Woods to reproduce such composure in the replay at Old Trafford. But with Forest's attack no more effective than it had been in the first meeting, the burden fell again on the young goalkeeper, who was still unbeaten when John O'Hare chased a through pass into the Liverpool area with Phil Thompson in close pursuit. With the most expertly timed professional foul, or so it seemed at the time and television later confirmed, Thompson brought the Forest player crashing down a foot outside the penalty area. But referee Pat Partridge did not have the benefit of the cameras and Forest were awarded a penalty, which John Robertson swept past Clemence to give them the trophy.

Yet the matter did not rest there. The incensed Thompson, provoked beyond reason, informed a television interviewer that the decision was a disgrace and subsequently found himself fined by the League for bringing the game into disrepute. Neutral observers were convinced, nevertheless, that justice was done when Partridge made his mistake.

Not for the first time Wrexham had stolen the show in the early rounds, maintaining their giant-killing reputation by advancing a round further than the previous season, and reaching the last eight. In doing so they eliminated two clubs of higher status, Charlton and Bristol City, before receiving their comeuppance against Liverpool. Bury, from the same Third Division, emulated them, reaching the quarter-finals after embarrassing Millwall - who had defeated Newcastle at St. James's Park - and humbling West Bromwich Albion before losing to Forest.

Forest showed their mettle in front of the partisan Gigg Lane crowd but it was pure inspiration that enabled them to overwhelm Leeds in the semi-final, and a case of proving that they did ultimately possess the resources to win a major trophy when Liverpool were beaten. If Clough and his able assistant Peter Taylor, who used to be a goalkeeper, had spotted a dead cert in Shilton, they must also have realised the potential of his extremely reliable understudy.
