

The North American Soccer League

1971

The North American Soccer League expanded from six to eight teams in 1971 as teams from New York and Toronto returned to the field. On the other hand, Kansas City folded and were replaced by a team from Montreal for the first time.

As in 1970 the teams played a 24-game schedule that included four games against foreign opposition. This time the foreign interest was provided by the Scottish club Hearts from Edinburgh, Lanerossi from the city of Vicenza in Italy and the Greek club Apollon of Athens. The fourth team was the Brazilian club, Bangu of Rio de Janeiro, who had represented

Houston during the United Soccer Association in 1967.

In the play-offs, sudden-death overtime was introduced for the first time, and it produced a semi-final game between Dallas and Rochester in Rochester that lasted 176 minutes before the Lancers scored the winner. Under this system, if the teams were tied after 90 minutes, an additional 30 minutes was played, if the game was still tied the teams continued playing until one team scored the winner.

Dallas Tornado won the championship by beating Atlanta Chiefs in the best-of-three final series, two games to one.

The logo for the New York Cosmos is a circular emblem. The words "NEW YORK COSMOS" are written in a bold, sans-serif font along the top inner edge of the circle. In the center of the circle is a stylized soccer ball with a hexagonal pattern. To the right of the soccer ball is a large, curved, comet-like shape that sweeps across the lower half of the circle, suggesting motion or a celestial body.
