

FA Cup 1977-78

Wembley, fast becoming the graveyard for favourites, staged another of its traditional upsets as the FA Cup found a new home for the second time in three years.

Ipswich, those honest, hard-working country cousins from rural Suffolk, took the trophy and with it the praise of every fascinated neutral, most of whom had given them not the ghost of a chance against the new inspired Arsenal.

Unlike the previous rank underdogs Southampton who had spoiled the 1976 final as a spectacle by stopping Manchester United playing, Ipswich not only checked Arsenal's advance but performed so well when they had the ball that a scoreline of 4-0 would not have flattered them.

In Don Howe, their coach and master planner, Arsenal seemed to possess the shrewdest tactician in the game. Yet Howe and manager Terry Neill had no answer to the master-stroke devised by Bobby Robson and his assistant Cyril Lea that enabled Ipswich to control a compelling game from the beginning to its emotional end.

Arsenal were comprehensively outwitted by the Ipswich spies, who had watched them three times before the final, noticing that 90 per cent of their raids originated with Sammy Nelson at left back. They had observed that Liam Brady and Alan Hudson dropped off Nelson to create triangular moves that invariably succeeded in getting the entire attack operating along a broad front, employing Malcolm Macdonald's pace, Frank Stapleton's height, Alan Sunderland's enterprise down the opposite flank and the thrust of David Price just behind him.

"Stop Nelson and you stop Arsenal", Robson told his players, who carried out the command to the zenith of their ability. David Geddis was pulled out of the middle and told to occupy Nelson, running at him whenever possible, harassing the full-back whenever he threatened to take the ball out of defence. The scheme worked like a charm even if Ipswich did have to survive an early let-off, before they could get their game in order, when David O'Leary put his half volley too close to Paul Cooper's goal for comfort.

Ipswich's reply was immediate, Paul Mariner going straight down to the other end to pull his shot a foot past the far upright before smacking his next attempt against the bar.

With Clive Woods tormenting Pat Rice, Geddis forcing Nelson ever further back the midfield trio enjoying fruitful possession and the rock-like pair of Allan Hunter and Kevin Beattie repelling Arsenal's infrequent sorties, Ipswich should have been comfortably ahead by half-time. But the goal just would not come and when John Wark blasted two drives against the same post Robson must have despaired that it ever would. The Ipswich bench appealed to the Gods soon after when Pat Jennings launched himself sideways to produce a magnificent save and keep out George Burley's header.

Yet Ipswich were not to be denied for much longer. Geddis, receiving from Woods who had crossed over to the other side, set off on a run that took him past Nelson and Hudson. The cross was driven low into the goalmouth and when it came back off Willie Young, Roger Osborne pounced to score just inside an upright.

It was all too much for Osborne, who accepted the hearty backslaps from his jubilant colleagues before passing out. He was escorted off and replaced by Mick Lambert who helped Ipswich hold out for their triumph.

But if Ipswich received the ultimate glory any number of other small-town clubs had entertained thoughts of appearing at Wembley for unusually long in the competition. Three of the quarter-finals took place at such unlikely places as Wrexham, Millwall and Middlesbrough, whose visitors were Orient, who were to go on to win a replay just as they had when paired against other First Division clubs Norwich and Chelsea in the earlier rounds.

Millwall, whose tie was interrupted by crowd invasions, were firmly put in their place by 6-1 winners Ipswich but Wrexham fought to the end before losing 3-2 to Arsenal. In the other game, goals by Albion's marksmen Mick Martin and Cyrille Regis ended Nottingham Forest's hopes of the treble.

With so many of the glamorous clubs meeting each other - Chelsea knocking out Liverpool and Manchester City defeating Leeds in the two biggest collisions - and others losing to the giant killers it seemed likely that an outsider might reach Wembley. But if Ipswich were not quite that, Wrexham and Blyth Spartans certainly were.

The Welsh club, destined for their long-overdue promotion from the Third Division, had already disposed of Bristol City in a replay after a remarkable 4-4 draw, and Newcastle

United before finding themselves matched against Blyth, themselves no respecters of reputations as Stoke, beaten 3-2 at home in the fourth round had discovered. It was the most curious fifth round tie for years but Wrexham survived it with the help of a fortuitous last minute goal on their own frozen pitch that took them to an ultimately successful replay at St James' Park. Yet with Wrexham, then falling to Arsenal, only Orient from outside the First Division were left to contest the semi-finals and their man for man marking system failed totally in the all London semi-final at Stamford Bridge.

The other semi-final had all the drama, Brian Talbot hurling himself forward to head Ipswich in front at the expense of concussion which put him out of the game after only eight minutes. He had collided with Albion's John Wile, who received an ugly gash for his pains, but carried on well into the second half sporting a blood-smearred band that left him looking like a war hero. But gallantry alone does not win medals. Ipswich had more determination and to that at Wembley they added the style that was to make theirs one of the most popular cup wins of them all.
