

The North American Soccer League

1980

IN 1980 the number of teams making up the North American Soccer League remained at 24 for the third year in a row and this time there were no franchise moves.

League rules and regulations remained much the same as they had in 1979, with the 35-yard lines, sudden-death overtime and shoot-out procedure being retained.

While as usual a number of internationally-known names were added to the rosters of NASL teams in 1980, a number of players played regularly who were to become international stars in later years.

These included Vancouver Whitecaps goalkeeper Bruce Grobbelaar, who was signed by Liverpool at the end of the season. Detroit included Mark Hateley on their roster during this season, on loan from Coventry City but failing to gain a regular place in the team. Later, Hateley went on to play for England.

Mexican striker Hugo Sanchez made his mark on the NASL late in this season and again the following year before crossing the Atlantic to star for Real Madrid, while New York Cosmos included Julio Cesar Romero (or Romerito) and Roberto Cabanas in their line-up. Later, the two Paraguayans were to star for their country in the 1986 World Cup.

Other signings included Dutch international defender Rudi Krol, by Vancouver Whitecaps and Scottish international striker Peter Lorimer by Toronto Blizzard while Johan Cruyff moved from Los Angeles to Washington.
